

Module Synopsis

French Language 1 - FGLF01

This French module revolves around two major axes: people and things. Students will practise talking and writing about themselves and others, and performing simple tasks in situations of buying things by using simple but well-structured sentences in interrogative and assertive forms in French. This module will also help students develop an appreciation for French culture which is an asset in today's globalized world.

Module Learning Outcomes

At the end of this module, students will be able to:

- use basic French sentence constructions in spoken and written forms to make contact and exchange personal information with others.
- relate people and objects to their locations and attributes in spoken and written forms.

Course book

(You can purchase the course book online.)

Title: Le Nouveau Taxi 1 (Student Textbook + DVD)

Author: Guy Capelle, Robert Menand

Publisher: Hachette

Year of publication: 2014

ISBN: 978-2-01155-548-9

German Language 1 - FGLG01

In this module, students will practise using simple but well-formatted utterances and sentences in German to make first contacts and exchange basic information with German speakers in typical conversational situations. This module will also help students show an appreciation for the German culture, customs and civilisation in an increasingly globalised world.

Module Learning Outcomes

At the end of this module, students will be able to:

- demonstrate an ability to pronounce common and simple German words.
- use simple German phrases in spoken and written forms to make first contacts and exchange basic information with others.
- construct simple German sentences and questions in spoken and written forms.

Course book

(You can purchase the course book online.)

Title: studio [21]

Author: Hermann Funk, Christian Kuhn

Publisher: Cornelsen

Year of publication: 2013

ISBN: 978-3-06520-526-9

Japanese Language 1 - FGLJ01

This module focuses on the basic spoken and written forms of Japanese language. Students will practise basic interaction whereby they learn to use simple but well-formatted utterances to accomplish common communicative tasks in typical conversational situations against the backdrop of Japanese culture and society. As basic interactions revolve around oral skills, students will express the Japanese pronunciation patterns by learning the Hiragana and Katakana characters.

Module Learning Outcomes

At the end of this module, students will be able to:

- apply Japanese sound patterns and writing systems in reading, writing and pronouncing Japanese words and phrases in Hiragana and Katakana.
- develop simple but well-formed sentences in spoken and written Japanese to communicate in common typical situations.

Course book

(You can purchase the course book online.)

Title: Japanese for Busy People I (Kana version)

Author: The Association for Japanese-Language Teaching (AJALT)

Publisher: Kodansha USA

Year of publication: 3rd Edition

ISBN: 978-1-56836-385-1

Korean Language 1 - FGLK01

In this module, students will get to use simple but well-formed utterances in Korean to perform common communication tasks in typical conversational situations such as making first contacts and exchanging basic information with others and constructing simple sentences and questions. As basic interactions revolve around oral skills, students will use the Korean pronunciation system by learning the Hangeul characters

Module Learning Outcomes

At the end of this module, students will be able to:

- apply Korean phonics and sound patterns in reading Korean words.
- complete basic communication tasks in situations where money transactions are involved using spoken and written Korean.

Course book

(You can purchase the course book online.)

Title: Active Korean 1 (Textbook)

Author: Seoul National University, Language Education Institute

Publisher: Moonjin Media Co.

Year of publication: 2006 or latest

ISBN: 978-8-95391-229-8

Title: Active Korean 1 (Workbook)

Author: Seoul National University, Language Education Institute

Publisher: Moonjin Media Co.

Year of publication: 2006 or latest

ISBN: 978-8-95393-202-9